

Module 7 Expert Video

So in this module you have hopefully learned that gender is key in influencing responses to climate change, including that of human mobility.

And although gender inequalities often create challenges for women and gender minorities, how this plays out is different in different places and changes over time.

And as you have also learned, gender is not the only factor in play, it interacts with other social, economic and cultural factors.

So looking ahead, we need to be better at bringing this awareness into research and policy on human mobility in order to address gender injustices and enable people to make empowered decisions, whether that is to migrate or not.
